

Here if we are using standalone containers, for application deployment and delivery automation we need to write code using software configuration management tools like ansible/puppet/chef etc
For installing the middleware servers (tomcat/netty/jetty) and perform necessary configurations on top of them for deploying the application.

The devops engineers has to take care managing the server/container platforms through automation for upgrading, patching, backup or restore of the container envs.

